1. Having bowed to Rama, possessed of six attributes which are eternally uniform, and unconditioned by time or space, who is like a vast ocean of strength and prowess, and who is the Supreme Lord of all, the son of Vayu, desirous of crossing the ocean, flew up after pressing hard with his feet that great mountain.

Note—Though strength, prowess etc. are included in the six attributes, their separate mention is because Hanuman wanted to invoke them for exhibition of his own strength etc. in his present exploit. (Sri Vadiraja).

2. The ocean drawn forcibly by his strength became agitated and quickly followed him along with the aquarian creatures, and so also the trees standing on the mountain,

The mountain (Mainaka) which had been formerly thrown into the sea by Vayu, rose up for his sake (i. e., to give him resting place.)

3. At the time of destruction of the wings of mountains (by Indra), this mountain, who is the brother-in-law of Hara, was thrown into the ocean by Vayu with his wings thus saved.

This mountain of gold (or born of Himavan) with its several peaks shot forth from the ocean, for the relief of the son of Vayu.

4 - 5. He (Hanuman) did not wish for rest here, for he is never exhausted. How can there be exhaustion to one whose valour and strength are unlimited?

Merely embracing the great mountain, he went on, and on the way saw the mother of the serpents (named Surasa) sent indeed by the Devas with a boon, with a view to test his strength. He merely entered the mouth of her who had been blessed with the boon, that whatever she desired to eat, should fall into her mouth, and at once came out of it, thereby pleasing the Devas by respecting their boon.

6. Seeing his affection for the Devas and also his formidable strength, the Devas praised him and showered flowers. Thus honored by them he again flew in the sky and saw further on a Rakshasi named Simhika who catches persons by seizing their shadow.

7. Brahma had given her irresistible power to obstruct all for the protection of Lanka. She caught hold of the shadow of Hanuman and he entering her stomach quick tore it open.

11 – 12. Knowing the intent of Rama who played the part of a man of the world, and in accordance with that behavior, he (Hanuman) acted and spoke. There-after to such Seeta of similar behavior he gave the ring.

Whatever ornaments had been worn by Seeta, all those ornaments were on that figure also, as they had become doubled similar in all respects.

14 - 15. Though these Rakshasa-groups could not see this (on account of sleep,) still all the wise ones residing in the celestial worlds really could see it. For their understanding as acting, and for the delusion of the Daityas headed by Kali and others who were looking on (as a real thing), this acting must be deemed to have been made.

Note—The Devas knew the conduct of Hanuman to be mere acting, as they were aware of the truth. (Sri Vadiraja).

26. Seeing that son of Mandodari equal to Ravana (himself), he (Hanuman) thought that he (Aksha) was one- third of the strength of Ravana.

Note—The term hi indicates that Aksha was equal to Ravana in strength by reason of boon, weapon and physical strength. (Sri Vadiraja).

27—29. Ravana must be reserved for Rama (for being killed) and not otherwise. Should Indrajit be killed by me, his prowess cannot be witnessed (by us all). Therefore he (Aksha) being equal to both of them and being the third (of them) shall be killed by me. Having thus considered, Hanuman soon caught hold of him by his feet and jumping up, he revolved the son of Ravana, causing him distress by such reeling like a wheel, and in a moment dashed him on the ground.

32 - 34 Thereafter he directed the, best hallowed weapon sanctified by Brahma, unendurable by all (like Siva etc.) and, though hit by it, the monkey unaffected by it thought (thus): Most of the boons of Brahma have been violated by me (by killing those whom he had favored). But as he deserves respect from me, I shall now respect this weapon. Let me see then what these Rakshasa-groups pleased thereby will do to me? Thereby Ravana also can be seen

36 - 41. Then seizing that monkey, they took him near the king of the Rakshasas, and Ravana began to question him. "Oh monkey, wherefrom have you come, and under whose orders, and what is your object in doing like this? (i. e.,destroying the garden etc.)."

Thus questioned, he bowed to Lord Rama and then replied: "Know me to be Maruthi, the messenger come from the best of the Raghus (Rama), of transcendental prowess, capable of wiping out your family lineage. If you do not give up unhesitatingly the beloved wife of Rama, then quickly you attain destruction with your sons, friends, and relations. Even the highest of the gods like Brahma, Rudra and others, are not able to bear the arrows of Rama. How can you of little strength? Who in this world even among the gods, demons, serpents etc. is capable of standing before Him of inconceivable exploits, when He becomes angry?"

Note—The term prakopitasya indicates that Rama being all merciful will condone small faults but would mete out severe punishment for heinous ones. Such punishments being thus attuned to transgressions, anger is not natural to Him. (Sri Vadiraja).
